The Thomistic Institute of the Dominican House of Studies in Washington, DC, promotes research into the thought of St. Thomas Aquinas and the subsequent Thomistic tradition. The research of the Institute is both historic and systematic, deeply rooted in the classical Catholic tradition while engaging contemporary discourse and thought. The Institute also recognizes the importance of the philosophical heritage of the Common Doctor of the Church as a wellspring that can enrich the study of theology. An educational project of the Order of Preachers, the Thomistic Institute is situated within the Pontifical Faculty of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, DC.

Thomas Aquinas & The Mind/Body Problem

How might Aquinas' philosophy of the human person speak to dilemmas in contemporary philosophy of mind? What is Aquinas' hylomorphic conception of the human being as body and soul? How does his study of the diverse faculties of the human person (intellect, free will, emotions, physiological living processes) provide an illuminating account of human life? This conference will explore Aquinas' understanding of the person, asking the question of the perennial relevance of his contribution.

The first day of the conference is devoted especially to graduate students, either in philosophy, or adjacent disciplines. The second and third days of the event will combine presentations by philosophers with times of discussion and debate.
