Darkest Hour

Darkest Hour takes place in 1940 when Winston Churchill becomes British Prime Minister. The film is "about courageous leadership in one of the darkest moments in British history." When Churchill took office, "[o]n the continent of Europe, Hitler's troops were destroying the Belgian, Dutch and French forces" and "Churchill had his own political battles to fight at home."

The Shape of Water

The Shape of Water "has been described in many ways, perhaps best as an 'adult fairy tale.'" The film "tells the story of Elisa Esposito (Sally Hawkins), a lonely, mute woman who lives in an apartment above a movie theater in Baltimore, circa 1960." Elisa works as a cleaning woman at a top secret defense institution, and one day, the director of the institution, "brings in a mysterious, amphibious creature which he captured in South America."
