Starting with an understanding of our relationship with God's creation, we will discuss the problem and consequences of our responses to this global reality.

IF IT IS REAL AND WE DO NOTHING, WHAT ARE THE CONSEQUENCES?

WHY SHOULD WE CARE? ACT?

WHAT WOULD NEED TO BE CHANGED?
(personal, locally, nationally, globally)

REGISTRATION IS REQUIRED — $20-$30 as you are able

Presenters:

Al Price is an Associate Professor Emeritus in Urban and Regional Planning at the University of Buffalo. He spent years in teaching, professional practice and public service as a champion for low income housing and integration of best environmental practices. He teamed with environmentalists throughout the Northeast US and Caribbean.

Jerry McKenna spent years in field environmental monitoring and measurement as well as a university community outreach teacher and environmental researcher.

Harry L. Allen, PhD, worked for the US Environmental Protection Agency for years as an environmental expert in remediation, working in 50 states and 18 foreign countries. He presently teaches Environmental Science and Sustainability.

“The environmental crisis is a theological problem, a problem coming from views of God and ourselves that encourages or permits our destructive, unjust actions.” — Sallie McFague, A New Climate for Theology
